

WAS ADAM A CHINAMAN?

Prof. J. de Morgan, Famous Egyptologist, Thinks He Was

Has Just Made Startling Discoveries in Underground Egypt-The Garden of Eden Was in China.

The famous Egyptologist, Prof. J. de Morgan, who stands at the head of the antiquarians of the whole world, has just made startling discoveries in underground Egypt, which prove the founders, not only of Egyptian civilization, but also of the civilization of the whole world, were Chinese.

M. de Morgan has been for many years director general of antiquities of the Egyptian government. He claims in his great work which has just now been brought out in Paris, "Recherches sur les Origines de l'Egypte, l'Age de la Pierre et les Metaux" ("Researches into the Origin of Egypt—the Age of Stone and Metal") that the boasted civilization of Egypt comes by way of Assyria from central China, and proves that the origin of our civilization really comes from Assyria and Egypt, as has been generally held heretofore by scholars.

But M. de Morgan says in all Africa we find the flints and the iron implements, but where are the bronze implements which are found in other continents? Every antiquarian knows that no race, save the African, has gone directly from flint to iron—the age of bronze is a necessary connecting link. But this link is missing.

Where is the missing link? M. de Morgan cannot find it short of China. There was the regular advance from stone to bronze, from bronze to iron, and hence he concludes that this is one proof that the art of working metals came from China to Assyria, from Assyria to Egypt, when some Assyrian tribes conquered the original inhabitants and brought its arts with it, but he has still other proofs. He finds that the hieroglyphics of Egypt are very much like the earliest form of writing among the Assyrians.

Another proof that the Pharaohs were of a foreign race is the fact that not a single trace of the art of the Pharaohs has been found in the archaic tombs.

Commenting on the theory of M. de Morgan, Prof. Haupt, professor of Hebrew, Assyrian, and other Semitic languages in Johns Hopkins university, says:

"I have always believed that the civilization of ancient Egypt was derived from Babylonia, more especially from southern Babylonia, bordering on the northern shore of the Persian gulf. The Babylonians who invaded Egypt may have been Semites, but their civilization was, no doubt, derived from the non-Semitic aborigines of Babylonia—viz., the Sumerians.

"Many points of contact between the Sumerians and the Chinese have already been pointed out. Prof. Terrien de Lacouperie, of London, has written on this subject, and Rev. C. J. Ball has published a number of papers on linguistic affinities between Sumerian and Chinese."

LOSES A SLICE FROM HIS NOSE.

Youthful St. Louisian Steps on Rover's Tail.

Charles Anderson, of St. Louis, will go through life minus the tip of his nose as the result of his fondness for teasing animals. He was a dispensary patient the other day and Dr. Carney cauterized the place on his face where the teeth of a dog had torn away the flesh. Charlie is three years old and lives with his parents at 1507 Chestnut street. Domesticated at this place is a dog of low degree, so far as breed is concerned. It was Charlie's favorite pastime to step on Rover's tail. The baby did it once too often.

While the family were at breakfast he crawled under the table and stamped one little foot on the animal's caudal appendage. Rover growled. Charlie chuckled and did it again. Then with a savage bark the animal sprang at the little fellow, and there was a cry of pain. When Mrs. Anderson rescued her son she saw that blood was streaming down his face, and that part of his nose was missing.

BUGS DOWN HER NECK.

Mrs. Ridder Wants Divorce Because Her Husband's Usual Acts.

Dropping live cockroaches down the back of his wife's neck, exploding giant firecrackers in her boudoir at three o'clock in the morning and tickling the soles of her feet when she tried to sleep are a few of the delicate attentions Herman Ridder, printer, of New York city, is alleged to have bestowed upon his spouse.

The woman is now seeking a divorce from him. He used to live at 157 West Sixty-fifth street, where he is at present his wife does not know.

The insects worried Mrs. Ridder into a state of chronic insomnia, and came near hurrying her into a premature grave, she declares.

A Welsh Island.

Caldy island, at the entrance to Caer-maythen bay, Wales, containing 530 acres, has just been sold. The owner is free from all county and other land taxes. The island was once the haunt of buccannery and pirates, and was a harbor of refuge for John Paul Jones, whose name is attached to its little bay. Caldly has a lighthouse.

New Electrical Iron.

A new type of electrically heated pressing iron derives its heat not from the expenditure of the current in passing through a wire of high resistance, but from an electric arc formed inside of the iron.

STILL AFTER A PENSION.

Newly Declared He Has Found the Real Dan Benton.

William Newby, who was the chief figure in the most sensational pension fraud case in the history of this country, was in Cairo, Ill., the other day on his way home from a visit to Missouri. He will be remembered as the man who was sent to the Chester penitentiary for two years, after being convicted of having sought to collect a pension from the government as William Newby, when the evidence showed to the satisfaction of the jury that he was Dan Benton, or "Ricketty Dan," of Trenton, Tenn.

Newspaper readers are familiar with his story. The man was seriously wounded at Shiloh. His mental condition was impaired and for over 20 years his family believed him dead. During this time he did not know his name or address and could give no information about himself. He finally recovered and went to his home at Fairfield, Ill., and made application for a pension, with the result as stated. His wife was the only one of the family who would or could identify him, his sisters and brothers declaring him an impostor, and it was principally through their evidence that he was convicted.

A correspondent had a long talk with Newby, and he declares he has found the real Dan Benton. The man is in the poorhouse at Springfield, Tenn., he says, and has been there for years. Newby says he will go to his home at Fairfield at once, and make another application for a pension and for back pay. He claims to be able to establish his identity.

William Newby was convicted of the pension fraud in the federal court at Springfield, Ill., July 22, 1893.

MOUSE IN DISAGREEMENT.

Nathan Platin Is Disagreeably Stripped and Sees the Baker.

Nathan Platin, of Brooksville, Brooklyn, bought a loaf of bread from Baker Moses Loenthal and sat down to eat dinner, of which the loaf was a part. In Brooklyn they don't cut the bread up in slices, but tear off a piece and eat it without ceremony.

Nathan and his family surrounded the table on which their frugal fare was laid out, and he picked up the loaf, tore off a piece, and then passed it to his wife.

He bit into the piece, and as he did so he turned pale, and, holding the bread off at arm's length, cried out in alarm. His wife screamed when she looked at the piece her husband held, and the children joined in the chorus. There, half hanging out of the piece of bread which Nathan held in his hand, was a little mouse. He had bitten off its head in biting the bread.

Nathan became ill, and as he jumped up from the table to run out of the kitchen, he upset the table and broke a number of dishes. When he recovered he went around to Loenthal's store and told the latter about the mouse and what had happened.

"The least you can do is to pay for the dishes," shouted Nathan. "Neff," shouted Moses. "Vat you take me for? You shouldn't mind a trifling little dat. Other people don't kick at a little thing like dat."

But Nathan insisted, and has brought suit for the value of the dishes.

HAS A NATURAL REFRIGERATOR.

Frigid Current of Air Found in Digging a Well.

William Meeker has a well on his farm near Cheango Park, N. Y., that is not only exciting much comment, but promises to be an acquisition to the neighborhood. The well in question stands about 20 feet from the farmhouse and has until a few weeks ago supplied the premises with water. For some time Mr. Meeker has noticed the supply was gradually growing less, and during the recent dry spell it gave out altogether.

Then he determined to dig deeper in search of a fresh spring, and the work was begun. The man employed in the work had dug down about seven feet when he noticed the temperature of the well was falling rapidly. He ascended to the surface and put on his outer clothing which he had discarded. Returning he was able to continue work only a short time on account of the frigid atmosphere.

On the surface the sun was shining brightly and the air was that of a mild November day. The cold air did not rise to the top of the well so as to be perceptible, but when a pail of water was lowered into the excavation a thick coating of ice was formed on it in 20 minutes. It is thought that in digging the well one or more veins of gas were opened and the chemical combination caused the lowering of the temperature.

GIFT OF PICTURES REFUSED.

Not Good Enough for the Nucleus of a London Art Gallery.

The lord mayor of London, Horatio David Davies, has declined the offer of David Sellar, chairman of the London Tramway company and a gentleman who is well known in New York, who offered to present the corporation of London with the nucleus of an art gallery, consisting of about 800 old Dutch, Italian and English pictures.

The declination of the lord mayor is owing to the "varied character of the works," but it is an open secret that the alleged Bainsboroughs, Constables and other old masters, after examination by experts, have been found to be hardly of the character to form the ground work of the City of London art gallery.

Fire Known to All A.

According to the best authorities there has never been a race of men who were ignorant of fire.

HAS A STRANGE AILMENT

Case of Daniel Query, of Blue Ridge, Ind., Puzzles Physicians.

Particles of a Gravelly Nature Are Being Continually Taken from Beneath the Skin—The Pain Is Intense.

In Blue Ridge, a small town ten miles east of Shelbyville, Ind., Daniel Query is a sufferer from an ailment which is not only baffling the skill of the local physicians, but which seems to be unheard of in general. His physicians pronounce the case "sweating gravel."

Query has been in poor health several years, and has been a constant sufferer from pains in the body, three years ago losing his sight in consequence. Almost six months ago Query had a severe attack, the pain being across the forehead, when to his surprise he felt three small lumps. The pain continued and the lumps grew in size. As they increased they felt to the touch as if there was a hard substance under the skin.

Query, as well as his assistants, thought this was the case, and they concluded to try the experiment of opening them. This was done with the point of a needle, and from each protuberance was taken a small hard substance that resembled gravel. When the particles were removed the pain ceased.

Since that day hundreds of others have been taken out; on some days as many as 200 pieces of these gravelly appearing particles are removed from Query's body. They appear all over the body, in the feet, legs, arms, hands, face, neck; in fact, no part is free from them. They are so hard it requires a smart blow from a hammer to crush them.

The attending physician, by the aid of the microscope, has satisfied himself that the particles are of a sebaceous character. For an unknown reason this secretion in Query's body is hardened, forms in little lumps from the size of No. 4 to No. 8 shot, thus making its presence known. When they reach this state they can be seen and felt and are easily removed. There is not a day now passes that less than 100 of these particles are taken out, and on some days as many as 200 are removed. The suffering of Mr. Query is intense.

HORSE'S STRANGE ADVENTURE.

Buggy Wedged Between Trees Impaled It Several Days.

Several years ago a valuable horse belonging to Levi Hoover, who lives near Hagerstown, Md., either broke loose or was turned loose from the hitching post in front of his house. This occurred about 11 o'clock at night. The horse was hitched to a light buggy, and was supposed to have been stolen and driven out of the country.

Mr. Hoover searched everywhere. He advertised and offered liberal rewards for the return of the property, but could not obtain the slightest trace. After he had abandoned all hope of recovering his property the horse was found one morning standing at the gate. Part of the torn harness was hanging to it, and a broken shaft was attached. The horse, which was fat and sleek when it disappeared, was much reduced in weight and apparently very weak.

HORSE FOLLOWS A HEARSE.

His Owner, Arrested, Says He Formerly Belonged to an Undertaker.

Frank Build spent Monday night in a cell at the Desplains street police station, Chicago, because he drove his horse and delivery wagon in a funeral procession, notwithstanding the protest of the mourners.

Build is a German and speaks no English. He told Justice Sabath through an interpreter that the fault belonged to an undertaker. The animal insisted upon making a place in the procession. Build pulled the reins and argued with the horse in the German language in vain, but finally allowed the horse to walk behind the hearse.

Justice Sabath thought the German had already been punished sufficiently and allowed him to go.

Preservation of Books.

Science has already rushed to the rescue of contemporary literature, which, as has been pointed out, is in danger of perishing, because of the wood pulp in the paper on which it is recorded. Prof. Werner Croquist, of Stockholm, has discovered a chemical solution which can be applied to books in a method similar to that employed in copying letters in a press, and which he hopes will greatly prolong their existence. He has tested his process on some old and decaying books, and finds that his solution gives to the most decayed sheets a toughness and strength which they had never before possessed.

An Imperial Tea Service.

Empress Frederick of Germany possesses a remarkable tea service. The tray has been beaten out of an old Prussian half penny, the teapot is made out of a German farthing and the tiny cups are made from coins of the different German principalities.

Queer Restaurant Sign.
