

AMATEUR DAY AT BASEBALL PARK

The baseball game at Heintemann park yesterday was lost by New Orleans. It was a comedy of errors and heavy hitting. The score tells the story as fully as the fans care to hear it.

FUGITIVE MAKES GOOD; RESUMES OLD NAME

Chicago, April 21.—Henry D. Walters is dead. Emmet Huckaby, who has been dead five years, has returned to life. Five years ago Huckaby, then sixteen, was living in Coushatta, La., and a warrant was issued for him charging some boyish mischief. Warned by friends, he fled.

Bloodhounds were put on the youth's trail. He threw himself into a stream and dogs and horsemen dashed by. In that stream Emmet Huckaby died, and Henry D. Walters came to life.

A few days later Walters got a job in Chicago, rose rapidly and joined church and clubs. A few weeks ago he went home to see his people. He saw the man who had sworn out the warrant for him, begged forgiveness and was told to forget the past.

Back in Chicago, Walters was confronted with a problem. He feared his business might suffer, if he discarded the name they knew him and assumed his own. He asked the public to decide for him. But he did not wait for a reply. He decided for himself, and Emmet Huckaby lives again.

GRAVATH'S SUPREMACY IN HOME RUNS CHALLENGED BY MANY

With JACK VELOCK, International News Sport Editor. New York, April 21.—Since Gavy Cravath has stowed up as a demon buster of fences the title of home-run king in the major leagues is a mooted question.

Gavy, at his best, was a rip-sawer. For three straight seasons he hammered out four-base wallops with a regularity that astounded the fans and busted the hearts of the pitchers. In 1913 Gravath potted nineteen homers out of National League lots. In 1914 he came right back with nineteen more to show that his performance of the previous year was not a flash in the pan.

And then, in 1915, he smashed home-run traditions of years by soaking the horsehide out of the lot twenty-four times.

Frank Baker, at his best as a home-run slugger couldn't hold a candle to Cravath. Though Baker led the American League in home runs in 1911, 1912 and 1913, and tied with Sam Crawford in 1914, the most he ever got in a season was twelve round-trip swats.

And now, with Cravath out of the home-run limelight, three swatsmen are sharing the title of king of the home-run hitters.

Wallie Pipp stands at the head of the American League. He topped his league in homers last season with a total of twelve. But two National League players have an equal claim to the title, for Davey Robertson of the Giants and F. Williams of the Cubs, both slugged out an even dozen circuit hits last year.

Perhaps some new slugger of the demon type will spring up this year. Who knows? And then again it is more likely that the home-run swatters who have stood out in front for the past few seasons will continue to hold their places.

A glance through National and American League records shows that the sluggers of Governor Taft's circuit were either luckier, faced weaker pitching or were heavier sluggers than those in the American.

Robertson and Williams, with twelve home runs each, head the list in the old league. Cravath comes next, with eleven circuit swats; Zack Wheat and Bonny Kauff poked out nine apiece; Paskeff and Stengel registered eight, and Carey, Saier and Merkle were credited with seven all around.

In the younger league Frank Baker, with ten homers, ranks second to Wallie Pipp. Walter Schang and Oscar Felsch have seven each to their credit, and Derril Pratt, E. Smith, Grancy and Cobb smashed the globe out of the parks five times each in 1916.

The total figures indicate one of two things—either the hitting in the National League is weaker than that in the American, or the old league is blessed with the heaviest sluggers. The National Leagueers poked out a total of 238 home runs last year, while 140 homers were made in the American League.

It is the general opinion that American League pitching is the answer.

Little Johnny Valle, who recently announced that he was ready to quit the ring, has changed his mind. Ernie, just now a lad who ought to be in his prime, gave as his reason for contemplated retirement that he was "burned out." Evidently Johnny had a case of blue, and a dark brown taste when he made that statement, for the last time he appeared in a New York ring he looked like a mighty sturdy little battler.

Ernie's change of humor was no doubt brought about by the fact that the field for a good bantamweight is better today than it has ever been in the history of the ring game in this country. Before Kid Williams won the title from Johnny Coulton there were few top-notch bantams in the business. Now there

AHEARN SHOWS UP IN FINE SHAPE

Young Ahearn, champion middleweight of France and England, worked out at the Orleans Athletic club today. He did six rounds of shadow boxing but no boxing. From all indications he is in fine condition for his go on Monday night with Jeff Smith for the American title.

Ahearn may well be called the dancing master as he is as light on his feet as a bantamweight and very fast with his hands.

Smith is doing his bit at the Y. M. C. C. The bout should be very interesting while it lasts. It will be twenty rounds for a decision and it will be hitting ability matched against science and foot work. The railbirds figure on a knockout.

GOTCH IS OUT OF THE WRESTLING GAME FOR GOOD

Kansas City Star: "If they'd lay one million dollars right there in front of me it wouldn't lure me back to the game."

Frank Gotch, retired and undefeated wrestling champion, was talking, and as he mentioned the million Frank spread his massive hands out in front of him as though to cover a stack of big figured greenbacks.

"It wouldn't be right," Gotch continued. "I owe everything I have to the great American public. Why should I re-enter the game and perhaps disappoint the hundreds of wrestling followers who probably would place a bet on me. I don't know that any of these men of today could throw me, but these isn't a one on the mat today who could have troubled me when I was in the game."

"But I haven't the speed I had then. I've slowed up. It wouldn't be fair to the public that always has been with me. I couldn't do myself justice. I'm through with the game forever as an active participant."

"But I'm going to follow wrestling always as a sport," Frank added. "I never will give up my connection with the game altogether. Sometimes I'll referee and I may help in developing some youngsters like Caddock."

"There's the boy with the heart," Frank Gotch was growing enthusiastic now. "There's the lad who is game and he's smart, too. He's learning my old tricks. He's getting them rapidly. When he fills out in weight he'll be king of them all."

BIG BASEBALL LEAGUES CAN'T STAND THE WAR TAX

Chicago, April 21.—Club owners in the American league will be forced to close their parks if a war tax on baseball, suggested in the administration revenue program, is demanded from them.

The league could not endure if the individual club owners are obliged to meet the proposed tax, it said. "I have conservatively figured that it would amount to about $1 million dollars for the season. That would more than wipe out our profits."

Because of the danger facing the game, half a dozen minor league presidents plan to go to Washington this week to oppose the legislation, which they say, would drive the smaller leagues out of business.

A. R. Tarnsey, president of the Three-I League, after a conference with President Hickey of the American Association, asked Frank C. Zehrung, president of the Western League; Edward Morrow, president of the International League, and John R. Farrell, secretary of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues, to join them in Washington to represent the minor leagues of the country.

FLAG RAISING IN JAMISON PARK

Arrangements have been completed for the flag raising in Jamison park, in Howard avenue between Baronne and Dryades streets, on Friday evening, April 27th, at 8:30 o'clock. The expenses have been met by a popular subscription of the citizens residing adjacent to the park and the ceremonies will be under the auspices of the Jamison Park Commission.

The faculty and pupils of McDonogh No. 13, Zachary Taylor and Robert C. Davay public schools, and the St. John the Baptist parochial school, the Mayor and Commission Council, the National Security League, Honorable Thomas Connell, Superintendent of Police Reynolds and members of the daily press, as well as the general public are invited to attend the ceremonies. A brass band will be in attendance and will render patriotic music. Addresses will be made by Hon. Martin Behrman, mayor of the city; Hon. John C. Davay, senator first senatorial district; Mr. W. O. Hart, and Hon. Daniel J. Murphy, representative from the second ward.

The members of the commission who comprise the arrangement committee are William J. Lawler, president; William W. Cummings, secretary and treasurer; A. L. Neal, John L. Cahill, John A. Reynolds, Thomas O. McNamara, George Jacobs, James Maney and Irwin Jamison.

NEGRO VETERANS TO FIGHT WITH "TEDDY"

By International News Service. Denver, Colo., April 21.—Should Colonel Roosevelt be allowed to raise an army to fight in France, a brigade of Colorado negroes will be among the first to respond and offer themselves for service under his leadership.

V. H. Walker, "boss" of the Democratic negro voters in Denver, is forming a brigade from the ranks of Colorado negroes who served in the Philippines. Most of them are members of the famous Seventieth, that saved the day at El Comero.

MAY SEND WOMEN TO THE COLONIES

From the London Telegraph. The far-reaching proposals for the development of the empire's resources put forward in the final report of the Dominions Royal Commission include a chapter devoted to the important problem of bringing about the better distribution of British citizens, particularly women, within the empire.

With regard to migration, it is pointed out in the first place that if the situation which will arise after the war is to be scientifically dealt with, the available statistics must be studied with special reference to sex, age groups and occupations. In the past the volume of emigration of men from the United Kingdom has been far greater than that of women. In the forty years from 1871 to 1911 590,000 more men than women emigrated from England and Wales alone. It is clear that such a condition of affairs creates undesirable problems both in the United Kingdom and in the dominions.

It is estimated that 65 per cent of the total net emigration of men and boys more than 12 years old in 1913 occurred in the age groups the normal increase of population at these ages. In the past the incidence of natural increase of the rural population with a decreased demand for labor (owing largely to the conversion of arable into grass land and other economic causes) rendered chronic migration either to urban centers or abroad both natural and inevitable. But by 1914 it was generally recognized (and the view is one in which the commissioners entirely concur) that the purely rural population of the mother country was not in excess of its own necessities. It is (they add) unfortunately clear that the havoc of the war will be felt most largely by the population of these ages which have in the past contributed by far the largest proportion of migrants.

Arrangements ought, however, to be made for some sort of elementary training, suitable to prepare women, particularly younger women, for life in the country districts in the dominions, and especially for domestic work there. The commissioners do not think that such training can be given with advantage in the mother country, and advocate the establishment in the dominions of domestic science training schools for immigrants, where instruction would be given, more especially in general domestic work.
